Editorial Review

Review

"The nineteenth-century documentation, organized by topic, yields a comprehensive and sophisticated understanding of the regional society. It can be used to give us more imaginative insights into Bronze and Iron Age cultures..." --Ira M. Lapidus, Journal of Anthropological Research, vol. 70, 2014

About the Author

Eveline van der Steen is an archaeologist who has worked extensively in the Near East, in Jordan, Syria, Lebanon, Palestine and Israel. She studied at Leiden and Groningen universities in the Netherlands, and is honorary research fellow at the University of Liverpool. Her publications include books and articles on the archaeology of the Bronze and Iron Ages in Jordan and Palestine, and on 19th century travellers in the Near East and their interactions with the local tribes.
