The Silence and The Sun By Joe de Kehoe

Exploring the back roads of the Mojave Desert is a rewarding experience – there is a real thrill when one tops a ridge or rounds a curve to find the remains of an abandoned mine, town or former roadside business. All is silent now; the place is empty and may be overgrown as the desert reclaims the land. But at one time, decades ago, people lived, worked and raised their families in these forgotten places. The Silence and the Sun, liberally illustrated with photographs, offers a selection of historical accounts on the growth and eventual decline of some of these desert sites and stories of the people who lived there. Not only will the book help inspire your desert adventures and explore places you never knew existed; it will also broaden your appreciation of this beautiful country. The desert scenery in this area, bordered on the north by old Route 66, displays a beauty all its own and the area is steeped in history centered on the railroad and mining. There are few roads in this region – some are prospector trails and others are tracks to abandoned mines, but for those who are interested in exploring and learning about some of the lesser known areas, the wealth of information contained in The Silence and the Sun is second to none.

BOOK REVIEW Title; The Silence and The Sun Author; Joe de Kehoe --Jim Conckle, General Manager/Editor, Route 66 Pulse Newspaper

About the Author

Joe de Kehoe is the son of a career US Navy chief petty officer and grew up on and near Navy and Marine Corps bases in California, Japan, Florida, and South Carolina. Joe graduated from California State University, Northridge, in 1970 with a BS in geology and earned an MS degree in geology from San Diego State University in 1972. It is probably a result of his geologic field work as a student that he acquired an enduring appreciation for the outdoors and a love for the subtle beauty and solitude of the Eastern Mojave Desert. During a 30-year career as an international petroleum exploration geologist, working in overseas posts for Mobil Oil and Diamond Shamrock Petroleum Corp., he lived and traveled extensively in the United Kingdom, Europe, Southeast Asia, Africa, and India including two mountaineering trips to the Nepal Himalayas. He is now retired and spends most of his free time driving back roads and hiking trails in the Rocky Mountains from his home in Estes Park, Colorado.
